This workshop will explore a framework practice that has been developed at Te Aroha Noa Community Services:

- Developing Integrated Practice.
- Working Collaboratively.
- Creating and Sustaining Change.
- Building a Culture of Care.
- Bicultural Practice.
- Reflective Practice.
- Community Led Development.
- Emerging Practice.
- Strategies for the ongoing development and integration of strengths-based practice in participants' work with people and within their organisations.

This workshop provides participants and practitioners with opportunities to work differently within their practice.

Facilitators

Te Aroha Noa Community Services

The Te Aroha Noa Community Services team offers you over 70 years combined experience in strengths-based practice. The team members include Bruce Maden, Barbara Stuckey, Staff from Te Aroha Noa and Robyn Munford, Massey University.

Te Aroha Noa Community Services is a community development organisation based within Highbury, Palmerston North. Te Aroha Noa Community Services has continued to refine its practice over the last 18 years through community led initiatives and has evolved an integrated, two generational, reflective model of practice which is strongly influenced by strengths-based practice. These integrated services include Adult Education, an Early Childhood Centre, Family/ whanau development, Counselling, Home Interaction Programme for Parents and Youngsters (HIPPY), Strategies for Kids Information for Parents (SKIP), research, community craft, aerobics and gym.

Bruce Maden

Chief Executive Officer, Te Aroha Noa Community Services

Bruce completed his Masterate Applied (Social Work) in 1976. His specialist interest was in community development, an interest that has provided a pivotal focus throughout his career.

For the past 20 years he has provided leadership to Te Aroha Noa Community Services, an integrated multi-disciplinary community development agency situated in the heart of the lower socio-economic and culturally diverse western suburbs of Palmerston North. Bruce has strong interests in Family Therapy, Strengths Based Practice, Adult learning, Counselling and Social Work Education, Community Development, Practice Research and Spiritual Direction. In 2006 he was sponsored by the Tindall Foundation on a study tour to Canada to examine Collaborative Community Led Development initiatives.

Bruce is a visionary leader and innovative thinker who deeply believes that communities must be involved in the development of the services influencing their lives and in them discovering solutions to the issues affecting them.

Barbara Stuckey

B.Ed, Dip Couns, H.Dip Tchg, TTC, MNZAC
Over the past 15 years Barbara has been involved in management Te Aroha Noa Community Services and has provided leadership and supervision to the Counselling Team. Her passion has been to develop best possible practice for the community it serves. She has been involved in Counsellor Education, therapeutic courses and groups, ACC Sexual Abuse Counselling and Relationship, Individual and Family Therapy. Her work uses a Strengths Based approach weaving in other methods to enhance the therapeutic relationship. She is passionate about her work and offers inspiration, encouragement and empowerment to her colleagues, students and those she works within the community.
