Head of School’s Report

In 2009, the College of Business joined an elite group of business schools by achieving AACSB accreditation. Less than 5% of business schools around the world have achieved this distinguished status. AACSB accreditation is confirmation of the high quality business education we offer. The AACSB Peer Review panel that conducted the review commended Massey for its strong tradition of extramural programme delivery designed to reach out into the New Zealand community, concentrating on serving the needs of more mature students. Further, the panel noted that at the same time Massey internal academic programmes are flexible and are well received by local and international students alike. The School of Accountancy is proud to have been part of this rigorous process, which led to the successful accreditation. The AACSB accreditation strengthens our commitment for continuous self evaluation and improvement of our quality teaching and research.

We are pleased with the achievement of accreditation of the Association of Chartered Certified Accountants (ACCA) in the UK in April 2009 which has awarded maximum exemptions to graduates of the BAcc and BBS (Accounting). We are also pleased by the re-accreditation by the Chartered Institute of Management Accountants (CIMA) in the UK. The School was approved for self certification status by CIMA. In January 2010, we were advised by CIMA that all the exemptions applied for the BAcc and BBS programmes were approved for the next five years. CIMA and ACCA accreditations join our existing accreditations by the New Zealand Institute of Chartered Accountants (NZICA) and CPA Australia.

We are proud of our long standing commitment to quality education for our students. For the third consecutive year, a staff member from the School was voted “the College of Business Best Lecturer” by business students on the Albany campus. Professor Jill Hooks was the proud recipient of the award in 2009, Dr Debbie Wilson in 2008 and Warwick Stent in 2007.

Dr Lin Mei Tan, senior lecturer, completed her PhD studies at the Australian National University, Canberra, Australia, in 2009. Her study examined the role of tax practitioners and tax practitioner-client relationship. Dr Norida Basnan and Dr Fairuz Salleh, international students from Malaysia, completed their PhD studies at the School. Norida investigated the performance reporting practices and accountability of Malaysian local authorities. Fairuz examined political influence, corporate governance and financial reporting quality of government-linked and non-government-linked companies in Malaysia. We congratulate Drs Tan, Basnan and Salleh and wish them successful and productive careers.

2009 was another productive year for research in the School. Research articles were published in international and national refereed journals including Journal of Contemporary Accounting and Economics, Abacus, Accounting Education, and the International Journal of Public Sector Management. Staff members presented papers in international Accounting and Business Law conferences such as the Conference of the Accounting and Finance Association of Australia and New Zealand in Sydney, the American Accounting Association Annual Meeting in New York, the Asian Pacific Conference on International Accounting Issues in Las Vegas, the Asian Academic Accounting Association Conference in Istanbul, and the Australasian Law Teachers’ Conference in Sydney. The School of Accountancy’s Seminar Series had visiting presenters from various overseas universities as well as staff members and post graduate students. Seminar presentations were held on all three campuses, Albany, Manawatu and Wellington.
The School is pleased with its leadership in adopting and implementing the new student learning platform ‘Stream’. Many papers were Stream enhanced in 2009 with full implementation in 2010. The adoption of this new platform, which enhances our students’ learning experience, required significant resources, and time and effort by School staff. The School continues to lead in the adoption and implementation of information technology, providing an excellent opportunity for engagement with our students and to meet their diverse learning needs.

An Investigation into the Performance Reporting Practices and Accountability of Malaysian Local Authorities

Within the notion of New Public Management (NPM) and theoretical framework of accountability, the research aims to investigate whether current performance reporting of Malaysian local authorities meets the expectations of stakeholders. The intention is to make recommendations about the future direction of performance reporting of Malaysian local authorities. To achieve these aims, the research has the following objectives: (1) to identify the perceptions of stakeholders of Malaysian local authorities on the performance accountability of local authorities; (2) to identify the information which the stakeholders consider relevant in the monitoring and assessment of local authority performance; (3) to evaluate the extent and quality of such information as disclosed in local authority annual reports; and (4) to determine whether the informational expectations are currently being met.

The research employs a questionnaire survey, a Delphi exercise (a means of seeking consensus of expert opinions), and content analysis of annual reports. Both descriptive and analytical methods are employed to support the analysis of the empirical findings.

The research will contribute to the body of literature that documents one aspect of NPM, namely performance reporting. The findings of the research are expected to support the notion that NPM provides a fundamentally different approach to reform. In addition, the findings will contribute to our understanding of accountability as interpreted by key stakeholders of local authorities located within the context of a developing country. Specifically, in relation to Malaysia, the findings could potentially assist public sector administrators and will be of significance to policy makers interested in improving the performance management of Malaysian public entities, particularly local authorities.

Fairuz Salleh

Recent well-known corporate misdeeds suggest that financial reporting quality has been questioned and is under scrutiny (Penman, 2003) and that poor corporate governance structure has been identified as one of the contributing factors to this (Claessens and Fan, 2002). In addition, political influence has also been related to the issuance of low quality financial reports (Ball et al., 2003; Luey and Oberholzer-Gee, 2003a) and weak corporate governance (ADB, 1998). Based on contingency and agency theories, the proposed study will attempt to investigate the relationship between political influence, corporate governance and financial reporting quality. Data from 1999 to 2003 of Malaysian government-linked and non-government linked companies will be used. It is hypothesized that political influence causes lower financial reporting quality; political influence causes weaker corporate governance; weak corporate governance causes low financial reporting quality; and corporate governance mediates the effects of political influence on financial reporting quality. Seemingly unrelated regression analysis will be employed to test the hypotheses. In addition, a qualitative approach (interviews) will be used to complete the triangulation design of the proposed research.

The findings are expected to empirically support previous studies on the effects of political influence on corporate governance and financial reporting quality. The proposed study will also provide insights and additional guidance for regulators and policy makers in improving the design of corporate governance features and financial reporting frameworks.

Towards an Understanding of the Tax Practitioner-Client Role Relationship: A Role Analysis

This thesis investigates the practitioners’ and the business taxpayers’ roles and relationship using a Tax Practitioner-Client Role Model. This Model is used as a framework for developing a mail survey sent to a sample of business taxpayers and an independent sample of tax practitioners to collect data on their role expectations, experiences and practices, and factors affecting their roles in a tax setting. The findings show that aggressive tax decisions arise from complex interplay between taxpayer and tax practitioner. Practitioners adapted their decision making to suit cautious or aggressive clients. Their assessment of the likelihood of clients being audited or sanctioned was associated with giving advice that is more conservative or more aggressive, but these effects disappeared when practitioners’ own risk propensity was taken into account. Practitioners’ firm size was also associated with more cautious or more aggressive advice giving. In comparison, taxpayers’ own risk propensity and perceived risk of sanctions predicted their decisions to accept or reject their practitioners’ aggressive advice.

While individual characteristics of taxpayers and practitioners were important in making particular decisions, interactions between them took place against a background of shared understandings of roles as well as some misunderstandings. The strongest evidence of shared understandings was found through the dimensions that defined expectations, experiences and practices. Both practitioners and taxpayers conceptualised the other in terms of three dimensions of ‘demands’ and ‘responses’: technical proficiency, cautious advice giving, and aggressive advice giving in this order of importance. Both practitioners and taxpayers concurred on the order, but when it came to deciding whether taxpayers received what they expect from their practitioners and whether practitioners delivered on what they perceived to be their clients’ expectations, some interesting ambiguities and conflicts emerged. Taxpayers want all three types of advice, but considered that practitioners fell short of the performance standards expected. Only the technically proficient gap and trust in practitioners affected satisfaction with practitioners’ services. This finding implies that a trusting relationship coupled with a competent practitioner is what helps to establish a good practitioner-client relationship.

Tax practitioners perceived themselves differently from the way taxpayers perceived them. They saw themselves as being technically competent, more cautious, and less aggressive in giving tax advice than expected. This finding possibly reflects that practitioners are adept at adapting to their clients, and perhaps even weeding out clients who are not likely to work cooperatively. Qualitative data showed that practitioners are well versed in persuading, listening to, and negotiating with clients. Interactions between a practitioner and client not only affected the ultimate decision made by the client but also helped to resolve role conflict. Interaction is indeed part and parcel of the whole decision making process.

The Determinants of Audit Fees in the US and New Zealand in the Post SOX Period

This study examines the audit fee determinants in both US and New Zealand after the introduction of SOX (US) and corporate governance principles (NZ), respectively. This study extends previous studies that looked at the determinants of audit fees by including the audit committee characteristics and executive compensation as additional factors. This study is motivated by the increasing interest of the academic and business communities regarding the level and structure of executive compensation and the role played by the various committees of the board of directors. In this paper, I examine how audit fees are determined by various factors that includes executive compensation, audit committee and the regulatory changes. I contend that audit and non-audit fee changes should reflect a stronger association with local governance regulations such as the adoption of NZ IFRS and NZX rules, and a weaker association with international regulations such as SOX. I also contend audit fees are associated with independent audit committee and executive compensation.

Performance Auditing and Public Sector Accountability: A Fijian Case Study

Public sector auditing has expanded from providing an independent and professional assurance on the usage of resources by the government to a wide range of management issues including performance auditing (Burrowes and Persson, 2000; Parker, 1990). A historical analysis of the Anglo-American literature on development and emergence of public sector performance auditing indicates that there were various factors, which led to the development of performance auditing. Some of these factors are: public sector auditing profession, the changes in the legislature and statutes, calls for greater government accountability in the use of public sector resources by social and other lobby groups and, in some instances, the government itself. Literature on performance auditing has established that it is widely accepted that performance-auditing focuses on economy, efficiency and effectiveness but a clearly defined meaning of these concepts is not easily discernible. Nonetheless, advocates of performance auditing promote the view that performance auditing would improve public sector accountability by focusing on the way the public sector resources are managed.

In the Fijian context, the Fijian Audit Office implemented public sector performance auditing and then it was withdrawn. The aim of this research project is to understand the practice and the processes by which performance auditing was undertaken and then withdrawn in Fiji by the Fiji Audit Office. The research project is also aims to establish a theoretical meaning of economy, efficiency and effectiveness.

The research will be grounded in Laughlin's (1995) Middle Range Theory in which a skeletal framework for both methodology and theory are fleshed out in the context of an empirical research.

Fat Taxes or Skinny Subsidies? Taxing Food in New Zealand

Obesity is an increasing problem in New Zealand, with the consequent increased health costs of heart disease, strokes and diabetes. The proposed research addresses the problem of obesity by investigating the effect of a tax on obesogenic foods, particularly those which are high in fat and sugar. The research explores the economic rationale for implementing food taxes, and how food tax policy should be designed and implemented in the context of the current New Zealand health and tax systems. This will be undertaken by using the Linear Expenditure System, a behavioural microsimulation model, to measure the welfare effects of an indirect tax on NZ households using the Household Economic Survey as a dataset.

The Impact of Culture, Corporate Characteristics and Governance on Corporate Social Reporting of Malaysian Shariah-Approved Companies

The Islamic capital market (ICM) is one of the fastest growing segments of today's financial system in Malaysia. It plays an important complementary role to the conventional market, functioning as a significantly large alternative market for capital seekers and providers. It provides a range of instruments which comply with Islamic principles and are available to all investors who would like to participate in investments that abide by those principles or simply want to take part in ethical investments.

The objective of my work is to investigate the extent of corporate social disclosure (conventional disclosure items and Islamic disclosure items) in the annual reports of Shariah-approved companies (ShAC), one of the components of the ICM. Additionally, I aim to provide a better understanding of the potential effects of culture, corporate characteristics and governance on the level of disclosure by examining the relationship between the extent of disclosure and these factors. Since ShAC are expected to serve social responsibility norms, i.e., social justice, fairness and well-being of society, they are likely to create a demand for corporate social reporting (CSR).

The Impact of International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS): A study of Early Adopters in New Zealand

The aim of the research is to investigate the impact that IFRS has had on reporting entities in New Zealand, that have elected to adopt IFRS before it became mandatory to do so as from 1 January 2007 (“Early Adopters”), and to investigate why these entities chose to adopt early.

The unique contribution of the proposed study is that it will provide early empirical evidence for New Zealand regarding the impact of IFRS, as well as extending the relatively limited understanding we currently have of motivation for early adoption in the face of sweeping changes to accounting standards.

Specifically, the intention is to conduct both quantitative and qualitative research to identify the significance of financial as well as non-financial impacts of the switch from New Zealand Generally Accepted Accounting Practice (NZ GAAP) to IFRS. These impacts are to be measured mainly by analysis of financial statements in the year of adoption of IFRS, but are also to be supplemented by use of questionnaires which are to be followed up, where appropriate, by interviews. The information acquired relating to these impacts is to be evaluated within the framework of Positive Accounting Theory, namely that Early Adopters are likely to be motivated by self-interest, which may arise in a variety of different ways. While the quantitative aspects of the study should answer questions concerning what impacts and why reasons there were for early adoption, the qualitative aspects of the study should build on this to provide a richer understanding and additional insights/tacit themes, from various perspectives, that would be unlikely to otherwise have emerged. It will focus on descriptions of how and why in relation to impacts of/motivation for the early adoption of IFRS and it will be open to perspectives additional to those which may arise within the Positive Accounting Theory framework.

Sporting Achievement

In August 2009, Business Law Lecturer, Feona Sayles played in her biggest tournament yet at the Merdeka Asia-Pacific Indoor Championships in Kuala Lumpur Malaysia. Feona qualified for the tournament when she won the New Zealand Community Trust finals in Rotorua in April.

Bowling on the special carpet-like turf at the Tournament makes forecasting her result tough, she said, as she is used to play on natural lawn. Access to playing on the special surface is limited in New Zealand making such training hard to come by. Bowlers from Fiji, Australia and Malaysia competed. Feona also competed in the mixed doubles with Darren Redway from Canterbury, South Island.

Feona missed out on a final placing at the Asia Merdeka Indoor Championships in Malaysia, finishing third of the 21 female bowlers. The mixed double team of Feona and Darren was unplaced.

Internal and Extramural Studies

Some papers in the School are offered internally and extramurally. Some others are offered internally or extramurally. Extramural programmes offer opportunities for long distance study at the comfort of a student’s own environment. Extramural programmes may include contact/block courses. Contact courses are a chance for students to receive face-to-face tuition from lecturers and to interact with other students taking the same paper. Contact courses may be held at the Albany, Manawatu and Wellington Campuses of Massey University, as well as at a Christchurch venue. Some papers are offered in block mode. This means students are required to attend one or more periods of intensive study usually either in the Manawatu or Albany Campus.
