The kiosk computer service is used to provide basic access to some services for users who do not have a Massey network usercode and password. These users are typically potential students looking to enrol, and the services to be access are typically websites. These sites may be Massey sites, but may also be some third-party sites.

Because these users do not have an assigned usercode, system access cannot be attributed to an individual person, and therefore access is controlled to ensure use is appropriate, and sensitive or confidential information is not accessible. The kiosk service does not provide general Internet access to guests and visitors.

Because kiosk use cannot be attributed to a specific person, they present a substantial risk to Massey of inappropriate access to the University's network, including attempts to hack information systems. Because of this risk, these kiosks are fairly locked down, and more advanced features such as running non-authorised software, webcam access, and file and print services are either unavailable, or restricted.

The following outlines the websites which are accessible from kiosk computers. This is known as the 'Kiosk Whitelist'. If you wish to have a site added to the Kiosk Whitelist, please log a request via AskIT with the description "Please add the following to the Kiosk Whitelist", with the URL for the website(s), and some details on the purpose of this access.
